

BUSY DAY FOR GUARDSMEN AS THEY LEAVE FOR CAMP; MAUI MEN ARRIVE

Armory is Meeting Place at Early Dawn—Valley Island Organizations Come in Mauna Loa and Claudine and Camp at Capitol Grounds

It was a busy day yesterday for the men of the 1st Hawaiian Infantry, for the assembly hour at the armory had been placed at 6:30 o'clock, the earliest ever held there. It made some hard scrambling for guardsmen living in the outer sections of the city, but arrival on time was up to them and they made it.

In the early gray of the dawn they came from all directions with the armory as a common meeting place, and the rays of old Sol were hardly touching the edges of Punahele crater before the companies had commenced to form for entrainment.

Down Hotel street they marched to Alakea, thence to King and out King to the railway station, where cars and puffing engines were waiting. The entire two battalions were entrained in record time, Col. W. R. Riley being in command. It was a long train that passed out of the yards, 20 passenger cars and one side-door Pullman.

In the afternoon the 2nd Battalion, which is the outside battalion, recently formed, entrained from their respective stations on the Oahu railway. This was with the exception of the Waialua company, which was taken to the camp site on a train of the home plantation.

The quartermasters and hospital tents are placed on the opposite side of the railroad track from the main camp. The headquarters tents are equipped with electric lights and telephone.

Most of the Kauai tents were already up when the Honolulu contingent arrived.

The Mauna Loa arrived yesterday with Company E of the 2nd Hawaiian Infantry, consisting of 149 men and three officers; Company G, with 61 men and one officer, and the battalion commander. This made a total of 251 that went for the night to the capitol grounds.

This morning the Claudine arrived with more men from Company G, 48 in all and two officers. On the same boat is Company H with 91 men and three officers; sanitary detachment with 11 men and one officer, and one officer and four men unassigned. Sergeant instructors from the army bring the total to 153. All of these troops left for Kawaiaho this morning: on the train.

The Maui and Hawaii companies are to camp between the Kauai companies. Company L, 1st Hawaiian Infantry, is the only company not participating in the camp. This organization under Capt. Eddie Hopkins and Lieut. William E. Miles is on guard over the city water supply in Nuuanu valley, and furnishing men for the queen's guard. Attendance at Kawaiaho is estimated at more than 90 per cent of the total guard strength.

Following are some of the non-commissioned army officers who have been selected for duty as instructors:

OFFICERS AND MEN OF GUARD CAMP GET DOWN TO WORK IN GOOD ORDER

from Honolulu on Sunday morning it took only eight minutes to detrain. This may be a record and it may not be, but at any rate it carried out the order of things as they are done at the Kawaiaho camp.

Whoever was ordained to select the site for the camp must have had an eye for beauty as well as efficiency. On one side the breakers strike against the sandy beach, a stone's throw from the camp. On the other side the mountains rear their heads among the clouds. Added to all the beauty yesterday was a bright sky and a faint breeze which inaugurated the nature life of the camp.

Sadness at Queen's Death
Intermingling with the hustling spirit of the men at camp was an air of sadness. The camp had been named in honor of the late Queen Liliuokalani, and when the morning special train arrived at the camp at 10:45 yesterday morning the troops found the flag at half-mast.

And then the men went about their work with an earnestness and order which was a revelation even to the officers. "This camp has been named in honor of the late queen," said one of the boys as he hammered a stake into the ground. "It is up to us to make good more than ever now."

When the special arrived from Honolulu yesterday morning there was already a group of tents on the sand dunes makai of the railroad, as the third battalion of the 2nd Regiment and the first troop of Hawaiian cavalry had been in camp since Saturday. The headquarters and tents for staff officers had been placed near the railroad. The large mess hall for officers and the lunch counter conducted by the Sweet Shop were placed back along the beach.

Culinary Department at Work
After the arrival of the troops from Honolulu the men were marched to their quarters, where their rifles and equipment were stacked, and they then began a race to raise their tents. The old saying that "an army travels on its stomach" holds good at Kawaiaho, as the first tent to go up was the kitchen tent, and as soon as the stove was up wood was brought from across the tracks and the culinary department was at work.

There was a race on in tent raising, and the machine gun company carried off the palm. Long before the lunch was ready this company had everything in readiness. Other companies were right behind and then all were ready for "chow."

When mess-call was sounded yesterday the men lined up with their shining tin utensils and proceeded to investigate the first taste of field "chow." Over on the other side of the camp Major Dougherty and his staff were busy engaged in dispensing the various articles of food.

FILIPINO GUARD MEMBER DROWNS; LEAPED TO SEA

News of Tragedy Accompanies Matsonia Bringing Militiamen to Honolulu

Death, self-caused, followed in the wake of the steamer Matsonia on her first voyage as a troopship, when she carried a contingent of the 2nd Infantry, N. G. H., from Hilo to Honolulu last night.

Carrying his full guard equipment, rifle, bed and clothing roll, and fully dressed in his uniform, Lollo Borong, a Filipino, climbed into the after-mizzen rigging of the Matsonia and jumped into the sea at 2:55 this morning.

No warning was given his companions, who were all about him as he prepared to commit suicide. Little attention was given to him as he climbed into the rigging and not until he gave a shout as he plunged over the rail of the ship.

The words "Man overboard" was quickly passed, and in less than five minutes the engines of the ship were stopped and a lighted buoy cast after the man. Capt. William Rind reversed the ship's course and searched the surrounding waters for nearly an hour in an endeavor to find Borong or his body.

Due to the heavy equipment carried by Borong, about 70 pounds in weight, it is believed he sunk immediately upon striking the water. The Matsonia was off the island of Lanai when the tragedy occurred.

Borong was a member of Co. C of the first platoon and came from Honolulu. Fear of arrest in Honolulu on an old murder charge is the only reason given by his companions as the probable one for his suicide.

The guardsmen from Honolulu had just been paid a bonus by the plantation amounting to about $70 each for the Philippines. This amount of money is believed to have been in Borong's pockets when he went overboard.

While nearly all the Filipinos on the ship were engaged in gambling on the voyage from Hilo to Honolulu, it is said that Borong did not participate in the games and that loss of his money was not the cause for his suicide.

Of the attempt to rescue the man, Capt. Rind, master of the Matsonia, makes the following report: "The engines were immediately stopped and a lighted buoy thrown overboard. I turned the ship around and returned to buoy and steamed slowly back along the ship's previous track, but could find no trace of the missing man."

His report says that Borong "deliberately jumped overboard, presumably intent on suicide."

Col. Harry Morehead was in command of the Hawaii contingent of the 2nd Infantry, about 300 men in all, which was transported to Honolulu by the Matsonia.

BIJOU RETURNS TO MOVIE PLAYS

He stole for her. To her he was the noblest, most honorable man she knew. For her he decided to go straight; for her he gave up the "crooked" life. These are a few of the gripping episodes that go to make up "Babette," a Vitaphone feature film which begins this evening at the Bijou theater. With the capture of the Monte Carter company, motion pictures will be featured at the Bijou until further notice.

The sweet influence of Babette moulds a new man out of the former crook. But then comes adversity and the girl needs money to go away for her health. The man succumbs to the call of the crook life and gets the money—in the old way. Then come the police. The man had fled to the girl, but a turn of Fate comes to his aid and she never knows. The play is an emotional one, full of action and well presented.

Two movie "surprises" precede the feature picture.

posed of four companies from the four islands represented.

"We will make the best showing this year in the history of the National Guard," said General Johnson yesterday. "We will be 95 per cent strong as against about 90 per cent last year. Major Merriam and the other regular army officers are doing all in their power to cooperate, and I am sure that the men will benefit greatly from two weeks of hard work here. The men are cheerful and they are entering into the spirit of the occasion in a manner which means much in the success of the encampment of 1917."

TEXT OF QUEEN'S ALLEGED NEW WILL IS KEPT SECRET

Brief Outline of Story Behind Appearance of Unsuspected Document Given By Attorneys and "Princess" Theresa

The text of what purports to be the new will by the late Queen Liliuokalani, made and executed during the last few months of her life, today is in the hands of Attorneys Lorin Andrews and William B. Lymer, and will be filed shortly in circuit court for probate. This will names John F. Colburn, former manager and treasurer of the Kapiolani Estate, as executor.

Keeping his knowledge of the existence of the last will secret until the last days of the queen's life, Attorney Andrews on November 9 telephoned to Colburn and informed him that he had been named executor. Attorney Andrews declared to the Star-Bulletin today that Colburn knew nothing of the existence of the will and that he expressed surprise when he received the notification by telephone. This statement was by Attorney Andrews was reiterated by Mr. Colburn this morning.

Attorney Andrews and his associate, Mr. Lymer, vigorously deny that Colburn yesterday demanded of Colonel Curtis P. Iaukea and others at Washington Place that the funeral arrangements be turned over to him. Colburn, Iaukea, W. O. Smith and S. M. Damon, trustees of the Liliuokalani Trust, and Delegate Kuhio, were informed by letter of the existence of the purported last will and of the appointment of Colburn as executor.

Attorney Andrews today made this letter public. It reads as follows:

Letter of Notification.
"Learn of the fatal illness of Her Majesty, Queen Liliuokalani, and having in my possession a document purporting to be her last will and testament, executed by her on the 29th day of August, 1917, in which John F. Colburn, Esq., is appointed sole executor of her estate, and knowing that you hold a certain delegation of authority under instruments purporting to convey portions of her estate, I today notified Mr. Colburn of his designation by the queen as her executor and requested him to see you gentlemen as to the proper distribution of Her Majesty's remains, in case of her decease, and to take charge of her funeral arrangements."

"No one would wish any unseemly controversy at this time over this matter; but, under the will, it is imperative that Mr. Colburn should act as representative of Her Majesty's estate, and he has expressed his desire to work in harmony with you in all matters connected with the obsequies of Her Majesty. It is his wish that the probating of the will and the disposition of her estate be delayed until after the funeral."

"Trusting this notification will be received by you in the spirit in which it is written and that there will be no necessity for an unpleasant legal controversy in regard to the last rites to be performed for Hawaii's last queen, I remain."

The letter is signed by Attorney Andrews. "I wish to correct the published statement that Mr. Colburn demanded that the funeral arrangements be left to him," said Attorney Andrews today. "But it is now his duty to protect the assets of the estate and naturally he has to know of any expenditures involving the estate, as he will have to be responsible for the funeral expenses."

First Hint of New Will Last July
It was early last July that Attorney Andrews first received notification of his retention by the queen to draw up her last will. He first received the memorandum will. The interval was spent in changing and modifying the instrument. According to his statement the queen signed the will on August 29, he receiving it early in September.

"It was an absolute secret between myself and the queen," says Attorney Andrews. "I would not say who first brought the memorandum will to him, nor would he show a Star-Bulletin representative the queen's signature at the bottom of the last page. In appearance, the will is a very bulky document."

Parts of the memorandum will were delivered to Attorney Andrews from time to time during the process of arranging it, and some of these were changed by the queen half a dozen times.

Attorney Andrews says that he had been personally retained in the will execution, and that Attorney Lymer became associated with him yesterday morning.

Supposed Summary of Will
The attorneys today stated that Colburn, the executor, is not named as a devisee in the will. Prince Kuhio is, however, and so are the children of the late John A. King, Dominis, protegee of the queen. Instead of going to Mrs. Dominis, as has been intimated, the attorneys express the opinion that Washington Place, the picturesque home of the queen, will go into the residue of the estate.

Asked today whether the admittance to probate of the purported last will will put an end to the Liliuokalani trust, the attorneys said that would be a matter for the court to decide.

"The trustees of the Liliuokalani trust were notified of the existence of the will just as soon as it was known that the queen could not live," says Attorney Andrews.

Delegate's Suit Still Pending
Delegate Kuhio's suit to break the trust in which the queen's property is held is still pending in circuit court, having never been finally decided. One or two minor points, however, were passed upon by the supreme court. The lower court has never gone into the facts and there has never been a trial.

Former Circuit Judge Stuart on one occasion appointed Attorney Andrews as the queen's "next friend" and guardian ad litem, but the supreme court held that the jurist had no power to make such an appointment.

"The merits of the trust have never been decided," says Attorney Andrews, "and the courts have never passed upon the question of whether the trust deed is valid or not."

In his complaint Delegate Kuhio contended that the queen had been unduly influenced when she consented to the creation of the trust, which gave vast control to Colonel Iaukea and to the trustees.

Conference Is Held
Early this morning Attorney W. O. Smith, one of the trustees, conferred with Attorney Andrews and informed him that he, too, had a will executed by the queen. Attorney Andrews marked that if there was going to be any litigation he would prefer to have it after the funeral was over. He added that Colburn certainly should be allowed to know what expenditures were being made. Under the will which Attorney Smith has Colonel Iaukea, the late J. A. Dominis and the late A. S. Cleghorn are made executors, thus leaving Colonel Iaukea with sole power in this respect. This will is said to dispose of practically all of the late queen's personal property.

"Princess" Theresa Tells Story
That Queen Liliuokalani began preparations for executing a new will shortly after the Kuhio litigation died down in circuit court was the statement given by the Star-Bulletin today by "Princess" Theresa Wilcox Belliveau, who said that the queen had talked of the will before her and before a number of other women who used to visit Her Majesty often.

The princess says that the late queen was her own aunt as well as the aunt of Mrs. Elizabeth K. Pratt. "Because of our relation we should have something from the estate," says Mrs. Belliveau, "but I do not know whether we are mentioned in this last will."

Mrs. Belliveau expressed the opinion this morning that Colburn knew nothing of the purported will or of his appointment as executor until Attorney Andrews informed him by telephone.

"The queen did not like the trust deed," Mrs. Belliveau continued. "I heard her make this statement to others. She was friendly with Kuhio, but she did not like Colonel Iaukea. Mr. Colburn was no relation, but she liked him because she trusted him. I do not believe that Mr. Colburn had anything to do with her making the will."

ALLEGED WILL OF QUEEN HAS MANY NEW ANGLES

the Liliuokalani Trust, today informed Attorney Andrews that he has a copy of the will executed by the queen in December, 1909.

"Princess" Theresa Wilcox Belliveau, who claims to be a niece of the queen, says she knew of the queen's intention to execute a new will, and that these plans were begun shortly after Kuhio's suit to break the Liliuokalani trust had died down in circuit court.

Interested attorneys and trustees held conferences this morning and this afternoon with a view to postponing all expected litigation until after the funeral.

Arrangements are made to have some of the crown jewelry released from the vaults of the Bishop Trust Co. for use at the funeral.

The Star-Bulletin was informed this morning that the alleged new will does not name John F. Colburn as a devisee, or beneficiary, and that Prince Kuhio is named therein as a devisee. It is also understood that if the terms of this will were carried out, Washington Place would not go to Mrs. John A. King, Dominis, but to the residue of the queen's estate.

After Col. Iaukea, Prince Kuhio and

Mr. Withington were served with the notice yesterday morning of the existence of the new document, it was construed that Colburn intended to take charge of the funeral arrangements, and the three communicated with Maj. Francis J. Green at the capitol. It was then that Maj. Green carried out authority already entrusted to him by the governor and stationed military guards around Washington Place. This was fully provided for in the governor's instructions as to a guard of honor, but it is not denied that the trustees wished to have the territory act in taking charge of the funeral, to prevent any possible upsetting of the plans because of the second will. However, on behalf of Colburn it was stated this morning that no such interference had ever been thought of.

A new phase was injected this morning into the impending litigation over the late Queen Liliuokalani's estate when Attorney Henry Holmes, counsel for the Bishop Trust Co., announced at a conference of interested attorneys that he would be compelled to instruct the company not to surrender possession of any of the crown jewelry and other valuable effects now stored in its vaults, without an order of the court.

Attorneys immediately announced that no court order of this nature could be secured until certain matters which they are endeavoring to postpone until next week, including the motion for the probate of the newly discovered will of August 28, 1917, and the motion for the appointment of John F. Colburn as temporary administrator of the queen's estate, are filed in court.

At a later conference Attorney Holmes announced that he would use his best endeavors to get around the difficulty and was to confer with Circuit Judge Heen, who is the only circuit jurist now in the city, Judges C. W. Ashford and S. B. Kemp being on Hawaii with the congressional party. But by guarantees given by the attorneys and others interested in the impending litigation, certain of the crown jewels which have been requested for use at the queen's funeral will be released without trouble. Those in charge of the funeral particularly desire the coronet, one royal jewel, a magnificent diamond, and a number of orders.

A third conference is scheduled for 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, at which all interested persons will be present. It was announced this morning that, at this conference, a decision as to the exact course to be followed in the expected litigation will be reached.

The first conference this morning was held at 9:30 o'clock in the offices of the law firm of Smith, Warren & Whitney. Present were Attorneys Lorin Andrews and William B. Lymer, representing Mr. Colburn, executor of the queen's estate under the will of August 29, 1917; Attorney William O. Smith, trustee under the trust deed of 1909; Col. Curtis P. Iaukea, the surviving executor of the queen's will of December, 1909, and trustee; Attorneys John W. Cathart and D. L. Withington, representing Delegate Kuhio, who would be the sole heir-in-law of the queen if the trust deed and the wills of 1909 and 1917 were declared invalid, and Attorney L. J. Warren, who, with Attorney Smith, represents the trustees of the Liliuokalani estate.

This conference lasted about 40 minutes. The opinion of all concerned appeared to be that all questions of litigation and all legal steps should be put over, out of respect to the late queen, until the funeral has been held. It was resolved by certain mutual concessions from the various sides that everything should be postponed, but whether these arrangements can be carried out is still a matter of conjecture, some attorneys declare. Future conferences probably will definitely decide one way or another.

The first conference adjourned to reconvene at 11 o'clock, when it was expected that Delegate Kuhio would be present. He was not there. It was at this conference that Attorney Holmes made his announcement concerning the crown jewels. This was followed by a conference in Attorney Holmes' office.

Early this morning Attorneys Andrews and Colburn on one side, and Attorneys Cathart and Warren on the other called on Circuit Judge Heen in his chambers regarding the appointment of Colburn as temporary administrator. No action was taken, the court notifying the parties that he could not act until the proper petition was filed.

CONGRESSIONAL PARTY ON HAWAII THIS WEEK

should disembark at Napoosoo, but the plans were changed and the party, it was announced, would go to Kailua. However, the plans were again changed, and the steamer went first to Napoosoo, while the Big Island reception party waited at Kailua. Hence there was some delay before the congressmen and those accompanying them from Honolulu finally went ashore and were met by the waiting committee.

Here Circuit Judge J. Wesley Thompson of Hawaii delivered the address of welcome, to which Senator Poindeux of Washington replied for the congressional delegation. Governor Pinkham, who had been informed by wire of the death of the queen, made a brief statement of the demise and gave a strong tribute to Liliuokalani.

After the short ceremonies of greeting and the announcements were concluded, the party began on the itinerary previously prepared for it. Automobiles were in waiting to take all of the visitors and Hawaii folk and the party broke into two divisions, part going through the Kona coffee districts and part proceeding directly to the Volcano.

Among those who are accompanying the party on their trip through the islands are the following: Governor Pinkham, Senator A. L. Castle, who joined the party at Hilo; Senator M. C. Pacheco, Representative G. P. Wilder, Land Commissioner E. G. Rivenburgh, Surveyor Walter E. Wall, Judge C. W. Ashford, Public Utilities Chairman W. T. Carden, Attorney Frank Thompson, Postmaster D. H. Macdonald, W. R. Farrington, B. O. Matheson, George McK. McClellan, F. J. Halton, Representative Eddie Fernandez, Senator S. P. Correa, R. A. McNally and Thos. McVeagh.

Speaker H. L. Holstein, Frank Woods, Senator Robert Hind and Senator S. J. Desha were among those joining the party at Kailua.
